The Museum

The Museu Marítim de Barcelona (MMB) was created in 1936, and is a public institution devoted to promoting maritime culture and, particularly, the conservation, preservation and dissemination of Catalonia's maritime cultural heritage.

The MMB has very close connections with the city of Barcelona, both because of its own history and because of the building in which it stands – the monumental structure of the Royal Shipyards of Barcelona.

The schooner Santa Eulàlia

The building

The monumental structure of the Royal Shipyards of Barcelona is over 700 years old. It was constructed in the 13th century as a place to build and maintain the galleys and vessels of war of the King of Aragon Pere “the Great”. It is one of the most important buildings in the world.

Sant Sebastià lighthouse

The schooner Santa Eulàlia

This sailing ship, which is over one hundred years old, forms part of the Museum's floating heritage, and helps us to understand the history of sailing and maritime trade in our country. Owing to its historical and heritage value, in 2011 the ship was declared an Item of National Cultural Interest. The Santa Eulàlia is moored at Moll de la Fusta, very near the Museu Marítim. It can be visited daily. On Saturday mornings the ship sails along Barcelona's seafront, except when it is participating in traditional nautical events.

1 Shipyards and galleys

An exhibition on the history of the monumental structure of the Royal Shipyards of Barcelona, it was built between the 13th and 15th centuries by the Catalan shipping industry to encourage expansion throughout the Mediterranean. The visit takes you through the building, showing traditional maritime professions and the galleys, particularly the Royal Galley.

Audiovisual on the history of the Royal Shipyard (Drassanes Reials) building.

Model showing the Royal Shipyards in 1880.

Traditional maritime professions.

Don't miss...

The 1:1 scale replica of the Royal Galley, which was built in these shipyards, took part in the Battle of Lepanto (1571).

2

Catalonia beyond the sea Three hundred years of Catalan shipping (18th-20th centuries)

The exhibition describes the evolution of trade through the Mediterranean to transatlantic trade, as well as the change from sailing ships to steam vessels. Three centuries in which Catalan shipping opened up economically and socially to new worlds.

Barcelona before the development of trade with America (17th century).

Barcelona frigate. Training model (Barcelona Nautical School, 19th century).

Figurehead La Blanca Aurora (Lloret de Mar, 1848).

Don't miss...

Visit the remains of the Roman Mausoleum, dated between the 1st and the 4th centuries A.D. and discovered in the Royal Shipyards in 2010. Located by the beach, two funerary urns were found here.

3 Les Sorres X

A medieval boat

Les Sorres X is a little boat from the second half of the 14th century that was used for transporting goods. It is one of the few medieval boats that have been conserved in the Mediterranean, which means it represents a unique opportunity for academic research and disseminating information to the general public on coastal sailing at that time.

A recreation of the natural space where the remains of Les Sorres X were discovered.

The fishing boat Papet (20th century), heir of the medieval shipbuilding tradition.

Hypothetical reconstruction of the boat Les Sorres X based on the remains conserved.

Don't miss...

Enjoy a walk along the exterior perimeter of the monumental structure of the Royal Shipyards. The inner wall adjacent to the exhibition area for Les Sorres X dates back to the 14th century.

4 7 vessels, 7 stories

Seven stories narrated by seven people aboard seven vessels who touch on global issues such as the discovery of new lands, the sea as a leisure area, life on board a transatlantic liner, the sea as the setting for conflict, the goods trade, piracy and buccaneers, and technological changes. A voyage through the history of modern and contemporary sailing.

Model of the Santa María de la Victoria (16th century). It was the first vessel to sail around the world.

Model of the steamship City of Paris (1888). The transition from sail to steam and from wood to steel.

Cartography by Pieter Goos (Amsterdam, 1673).

Detail from the advertising poster Cataluña's Beaches (Josep Morell, 1940).

Model of the steamship Royal Edward (Glasgow, 1907).

Longitudinal sketch of the Reina Victoria Eugènia. Cia Transatlántica Española (1912).

Four-man outrigger. Championship of Spain (Barcelona, ca. 1924).

Don't miss...

The interactive Catalan Atlas, created in 1375 by Abraham and Judufà Cresques, is full of geographical, political and cultural explanations of the world as it was known until then.
